

A negotiated, two-state solution offers the best prospect for long-term peace and security for Israel and the region. I am a strong supporter of Israel, and I am committed to ensuring its security and survival as a Jewish state. Strong U.S. leadership will be necessary to achieve these goals, and I support President Obama's efforts to help Israel reach a settlement that is agreeable to all sides.

It is critical that all parties to the conflict meet their international obligations. The Palestinians must recognize Israel's right to exist, halt the violence and incitement, and agree to abide by all previous agreements. The Israelis must halt settlement expansion.

The United States must continue to work to engage Israel's Arab neighbors in search of a comprehensive, regional plan for peace.

I have a deep personal connection to the State of Israel, and I will always be a steadfast friend and supporter as Israel seeks peace and security.
